

Statement Regarding CGA Participation in SBC Summit Lisbon 2026

Willemstad, September 25, 2026

The Curaçao Gaming Authority (CGA) has decided not to participate in SBC Summit Lisbon 2026.

The Authority has taken this decision to ensure that its full attention and resources remain focused on priority operational matters, including the ongoing forensic investigation into the recently identified unauthorized access incident.

Since detecting the incident, the CGA has implemented a range of containment, security, and investigative measures. The unauthorized access was contained, the affected account was secured, and the CGA continues to work closely with relevant authorities and independent cybersecurity specialists as part of an ongoing assessment of the incident and its potential impact.

In the mean time the CGA has filed relevant reports with domestic and international Authorities relating to unlawfully gathered information from its online portal. Further the CGA is evaluating legal action against the German security researcher and is monitoring the publication of its leaked data on the web in order to have the necessary actions to remove those.

While the CGA values the opportunity to engage with stakeholders through international industry events, the Authority believes that dedicating its resources to the ongoing investigation and related activities is the most responsible course of action at this time.

The CGA remains fully operational and continues to carry out its regulatory and supervisory responsibilities without interruption and appreciates the understanding of its stakeholders and looks forward to re-engaging with industry partners at future events. As aspects of the matter remain subject to ongoing forensic and regulatory review, the CGA will provide further updates when appropriate.
